

Paul Martini Prize 2019

The Paul Martini Foundation announces the annual Paul Martini Prize for the year 2019 and calls for international entries. The Prize is endowed with EUR 25.000 and is donated by the Paul Martini Foundation, Berlin.

The award honours outstanding achievements in the field of clinical pharmacology. This includes the development and application of clinical-pharmacological methods for the assessment of therapeutic measures as well as therapy studies and their socio-economic aspects.

It was donated in commemoration of the eminent scientist and physician Professor Dr. Paul Martini (Bonn), in appreciation of his special contributions to the promotion and development of clinical therapeutic research which he has shaped over decades with his 'Methodology of Therapeutic Investigation', which was already published in 1932. A jury of six renowned scientists will determine the winner(s) of the Prize.

The submitted papers (not more than four papers) must be self-contained. They should be already published or in press (pls. name the journal) but should not date older than two years. The applicant has to be either first, co-author or last author of the paper(s). The written consent of each of the non submitting leading authors, equal co-authors or last authors of the paper(s) must be attached. The papers are to be submitted with 7 copies or via e-mail either in German or English to the
